OVERVIEW

The Redland Foundation is a Redlands-based philanthropic organisation and one of a growing number of similar enterprises across Australia.

The Foundation raises funds through bequests and other fundraising activities such as cause-related marketing.

All funds raised are retained in trust and income and/or capital, depending on the nature of the Trust, is dispersed for the benefit of the Redlands community including by way of this formal grants giving program. This Jeffrey and Geraldine Underhill Grants Program will be a permanent, independent and flexible source of funding for local projects and programs, capable of responding to the changing needs of people living in the Redlands.

The Redland Foundation is registered under the Commonwealth Corporations Act 2001 and operates within the constraints of relevant tax and company legislation.

Its Public Trust has been granted Deductible Gift Recipient (DGR) status by the Australian Tax Office. This means donations can be tax-deductible. The Open Trust has been registered as a charity.

Applications are processed and assessed by the voluntary Board of Directors.

There will be one funding round annually closing 30 June.

THE ROLE OF THE FOUNDATION IS TO:

- Receive donations and bequests (money in)
